FIRING SQUAD TAKES LIFE OF FRENCH YOUTH

Formal Funeral Services For Leader Who Swung Over to Allies Held In Algiers.

U. S. LEADERS ATTEND

Identity of Killer Remains Secret; Council Meets to Name Successor Today.

(By International News Service)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Swift retribution at the hands of a firing squad came today for a young French national, still unidentified to the world, who assassinated Admiral Jean Francois Darlan and plunged into uncertainty the future military operations of North Africa.

The murderer was put to death only a few hours after a hurriedly-assembled court martial voted the death sentence in a brief session Christmas day.

Almost simultaneously with the execution, formal funeral services were held for Darlan the one-time commander in chief of all the armed forces of France whose sudden alliance with the United States so greatly facilitated American and British liberation of Morocco and Algiers from Axis domination.

All leaders of the Allied forces turned out to pay their last respects to the slain admiral. They included Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of Allied troops in the European theater of operations and his chief deputy, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark.

Services were held in the Cathedral of Algiers and Darlan's body then was taken to the Moorish summer palace, scene of his assassination by a young French national whose mother is an Italian and who lives in Italy.

At the palace, Darlan's body lay in state for many hours. As French military and civilian officials stood by the bier together with Eisenhower and other American and British leaders, troops filed steadily past in last obeisance.

Darlan's body later was taken to the private chapel of the palace to remain until interment.

The young slayer was reported to have made a confession in which he denied that the assas-

"From the time of our landing the people of New Zealand went out to make our soldiers feel much at home as possible," Kinnelly said.

Crime Wave Strikes City Over Holiday

Police Probe Cracking of Safe at Mill; Purse Thefts Reported.

Safe-cracking, purse snatching and pocket picking added up to a miniature crime wave in Mansfield over the Christmas holiday.

At the Hanley Milling company office, North Mulberry street, thieves used a blow-torch and a hammer to pound off the combination of a small safe, escaping with cash and checks amounting to about $100.

The crime, committed Thursday night, was reported to police yesterday by M. H. McCullough, 301 West Third street, traffic manager of the mill, who found a rear window broken when he visited the plant Christmas morning. A radio and clock were included in the loot. Lieut. Carl L. Kalstein investigated.

G. L. Wiles 51 Crestline avenue told police that while scuffling with a group of colored men on North Main street Thursday night his watch was taken from a pocket. The timepiece was recovered from a youth by Patrolman John Gilbert aided by Patrolmen Carl Beard and John Grohol.

Reuben Felenbaum Richland county farmer, lost his billfold to two youths who assaulted him near Fifth and Main streets, he told police.

Miss Katherine Romada, 99 Waring avenue, told police her purse had been taken somewhere in the business area. She reported her loss as $11 in cash, a $50 diamond ring and a pay check for $39.42.

Ann Dimetry, 956 Paxford place, told police that her purse was snatched in a cafe at Fifth and Elm streets after she had cashed a pay check for $37 Thursday evening. Lieut. Kalstein and Patrolman Gilbert investigated.

George Wolf 765 Andover road, reported that his grocery store at 284 Cline avenue was entered Thursday night, gum valued at $1.25 being stolen.

Fred Schuster, 175 Bartley avenue told police that an outboard motor valued at $99.50 had been stolen from his garage at 27 South Walnut street.

ALL 52 ESCAPE

Survive Torpedoing of U. S. Ship In Atlantic.

AN EAST COAST PORT—(INS)—The 52 members of the company of a medium sized United States merchant vessel escaped in three lifeboats when the ship was torpedoed in the North Atlantic during the middle of November, survivors disclosed today after being landed.

The vessel was struck on the starboard side by a single torpedo, fired by an unseen submarine, they said. The merchant crew of 41 and gun crew of 11 had ample time to abandon ship in the three boats, even though a fourth was wrecked by the explosion.

One man alone, Romeo Bellavance, of Fall River, Mass., required medical attention when the men were picked up by a rescue ship one hour after the attack.

BODY FOUND

Sheriff Says Woman Was Murdered, Thrown in Water.

ELDORADO, Ill.—(INS)—Police today sought the identity of a young woman whose nude and weighted body was found in the icy water of an abandoned coal mine shaft three miles southeast of Eldorado.

A 100-pound block of cement was suspended by a heavy rope from the woman's tightly-lashed ankles and Sheriff O. T. Pickering said she had been murdered.

RETURN TO U. S.

Winant and Admiral Stark to Attend Capital Parleys.

LONDON—(INS)—United States Ambassador John G. Winant and Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of U. S. naval forces in European waters, have returned to America for Washington conferences, the U. S. embassy revealed today.

Admiral Stark recorded a Christmas greeting to all American forces in the European theater before his departure.

Last Photos of Darlan Before Assassination

City Getting Back to Normal After Big Yule Observance

Mansfielders were returning to normalcy today after one of the biggest Christmases on record and one that gave some workers from stores and offices a prolonged holiday.

While war plants returned to production, employes in a number of stores and offices were given an extended holiday. Many stores were open, however, to facilitate exchanges.

County offices were also closed today and only a skeleton force operated at city hall. The USES office also maintained regular hours today.

No one in Mansfield was intentionally forgotten on this greatest of holidays. The city had its Christmas dinner assured that its needy had been supplied. The Give-a-Christmas program had distributed 305 baskets through the Salvation Army clearing house and many additional Christmas dinners and baskets were supplied by other organizations and individuals.

Although snow and slush was on the ground yesterday wasn't a white Christmas by any means. Snow fell for about 10 minutes in the early afternoon and then turned to rain adding to the hazards of both motorist and pedestrians.

The Mansfield postoffice continued delivery of Christmas packages today.

Later the emperor opened an extraordinary session of the diet.

Japanese Report Bombing by Flying Fortresses.

(By United Press)

Japan reported that American planes had raided occupied Wake Island midway between Hawaii and Japan, Wednesday night.

An imperial headquarters communique said that "more than 10" United States planes of Flying Fortress type made the raid and asserted that four were shot down and six damaged.

It was added that one person was killed in the raid, that four were wounded and that four small fires were started.

There was no comment on the Japanese report in Washington.

LOCKED IN CLOSET

HOLIDAY DEATH TOLL HITS LOW

Wartime travel restrictions by gasoline and tire rationing reflected a silver lining today with no fatalities being reported in the Mansfield area during the Christmas holiday and a nation-wide toll less than one-fourth of last year, police surveys revealed today.

Several persons were injured in traffic mishaps in Mansfield and surrounding territory, with 17 deaths by accident or violence being reported in Ohio. In the nation death came to 178 persons, 99 of these being due to traffic, whereas a year ago 431 deaths were recorded over the Yule holiday, including 334 traffic fatalities.

Raymond Black, New Haven, is in Shelby Memorial hospital with a fractured skull and facial lacerations. According to the state highway patrol his auto Thursday night rammed a tractor-trailer outfit driven by John Loparo and Charles Scott, both of Cleveland, on State Route 96 four miles east of Shelby.

FIRE HALTS WAR PLANTS' OUTPUT

Four Factories Idle After Stubborn Blaze Sweeps Building.

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— Salvage operations began today at four small factories contained in a two-story building while arson squad officials investigated the cause of a fire which caused an estimated $73,000 damage to the four firms last night.

Nine fire companies required two hours before bringing the blaze under control. Occupying the building were the Deamude Machine company, the Metal Spinning and Manufacturing company, the G. A. McFarland Machine Shop and D. D. Wessels and Sons company, all engaged in production of war materials.

County Gets Top State Honor For November War Bond Sales

Richland today was named "Champion War Bond County of the State" for the month of November despite the fact that December war bond sales almost doubled the November total.

Award was based on the county's approximate $400,000 sales in November while the December total of nearly $800,000 will receive no special recognition since regulations prevent the same county being named twice as "pacemaker" for the state, according to Paul L. Eliot, chairman. Richland county was the fifth in the state to receive the citation.

As a result of the honor the county will be presented with a scroll citation and a special honor flag incorporating both the Treasury Department's "Minute Man" emblem and the state of Ohio seal.

Typical of the November war bond activities was the drive put on by the women's division, under the leadership of Mrs. Louis J. Ott, which resulted in the sale of $85,000 more than an original quota of $175,000. Intending to reach the goal of the price of a bomber, the drive netted more than enough to purchase a modern army pursuit ship as well as the bomber.

Total war bond sales in Richland county since the start of the program were reported by the state organization to be well over $5,000,000 now.

GAS STATIONS GET RIGHT TO BOOST PRICES

OPA Issues Order Allowing Three-Cent Margin to Meet Sales Drop.

LITTLE CHANGE DUE HERE

Lifts Freeze Level Ordered Last October as Result Of Rationing.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Gasoline dealers over the country were granted permission by the office of price administration today to sell at a 3-cent retail margin over cost, a margin which has been allowed Atlantic seaboard filling stations since last May.

The action thus permits dealers whose prices are now frozen at each station's level of October 1-15 1941 to increase their prices if they provide a margin of less than three cents.

(Major Mansfield bulk station operators declared today the retail price of gasoline in Mansfield and Richland county will not be affected by the OPA permit inasmuch as all the larger companies have been operating on a three-cent margin at retail filling stations for some time. A few cut-rate dealers may be required to alter their prices to conform to the minimum margin ruling, some officials think.)

Such an increase is not mandatory, it was emphasized by an OPA spokesman, but will allow dealers whose prices were frozen at an unprofitably low level—because of local price wars or other reasons—to get back to a profit-making margin.

A minority of dealers will be affected, OPA said.

The action was described as "part of OPA's program to aid small business establishments to withstand the impact of war time expedients," and to help retailers to stay in business despite the curtailment in sales volume caused by rationing.

The OPA also announced an increase of three-tenths of a cent per gallon in the retail price of fuel oil in 30 rationed states, effective next Tuesday.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA - (AP)— Wounded in the fighting near Buna in New Guinea, Brig. Gen. Clovis L. Byers of Columbus, Ohio, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action.

He has been promoted to brigadier general since arriving in Australia.

KIERAN RESIGNS

NEW YORK —(AP)— John Kieran the noted sports columnist who answers questions on the "Information Please" radio program has resigned from the staff of the New York Times and will write a daily column for the New York Sun, effective Jan. 4.

Kieran explained he no longer had time to do the traveling required of a sports columnist since he is making appearances in behalf of the war department and other organizations devoted to the war effort.

QUITE A FIRE!

Firemen Get Bottles as They Put Out Blaze in Car.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—It was a wonderful fire, firemen agreed, that occurred in the automobile of a Cleveland man today.

The man was delivering five cases of liquor to a cafe when the fire broke out in his automobile. He gave the firemen a quart each after they extinguished the blaze.

Allies Advance To Within 12 Miles of Tunis

Russians Report 15-Mile Gains In Two Sectors, Capture of Many Prisoners; Montgomery's Army Takes Sirte In Pursuit of Africa Corps.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's armies fell back on three great battlefronts in the war today—in Russia, Libya and Tunisia—as Allied troops were reported to have advanced within 12 miles of Tunis and the British army of the Nile captured Sirte after a 180-mile drive westward.

On the Soviet front, the Germans retreated in a half dozen key sectors, with the Russians scoring at least two 15-mile advances and listing 108,060 Germans killed or captured on the middle Don steppes alone.

German field headquarters said the Red armies were attacking continuously in the middle Don and in the Don-Volga corridor before Stalingrad, but declared the Soviets were halted and thrown back at many points.

A Nazi communique also reported the Russians had renewed attacks in force with planes, tanks and strong artillery support, in the Velikie Luki sector northwest of Moscow.

Dispatches indicated the plight of nearly 1,000,000 Axis troops faced with entrapment in southern Russia was growing hourly more critical.

On the North African front British headquarters announced Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's triumphant British Eighth army had captured the port of Sirte 180 miles west of the old El Agheila line, in pursuit of Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's broken Afrika corps.

Sirte lies about 210 miles east of Tripoli the last major Axis citadel in Libya.

"Our troops occupied Sirte at mid-day yesterday and are in contact with the enemy, who are withdrawing to the west," a British war bulletin said.

British vanguards were reported to have pushed as far as 70 miles beyond Sirte.

Simultaneously, the Algiers radio reported that vanguards of the Allied expeditionary forces in Tunis had reached a point within 12 miles of Tunis, the capital.

The key town of Tebourba, which the Allies captured and then lost three weeks ago, lies 12 miles west of Tunis, but there was no immediate specific indication whether that was the point the Allies were storming.

Italian headquarters reported "intense activity" in Tunisia.

Earlier reports had said the campaign was bogged down anew in winter rains, with the Allies clinging fast to a newly-captured height 30 miles southwest of Tunis and six miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab after beating off Axis counter-attacks.

French troops driving toward the Gulf of Gabes coast below Tunis were reported to have advanced with 40 miles of the gulf port of Sousse, threatening to cut the land link between German and Italian troops fighting in the Bizerte-Tunis zone along the northern coast and those in Tripoli.

While the last days of the year witnessed an ever-brightening pic-

STOPPED: Japs Driven Back Twice by British Burma Army

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The navy announced today that army Flying Fortresses based on Guadalcanal have bombed enemy shipping in the harbor of Rabaul on New Britain island, scoring three direct hits on at least one large Jap transport.

(By United Press)

NEW DELHI, India—The British Indian command announced today that its forces in Burma had beaten off two Japanese attempts to retake positions in the China hills, well north of the area where the spearhead of the British drive southward along the Bay of Bengal coast is established.

(This might indicate that the British had broadened their drive and were now pushing east as well as south.)

The Japanese counter-attacks were on Thursday, a British communique said. Only the Japanese suffered losses.

"Patrolling activity in the Arakan district (along the border above Akyab) continued without further incident," the communique said.

It reported that RAF fighters yesterday made several low-level attacks on enemy objectives in the Toungoo area of south-central Burma, and damaged Japanese planes on the ground at Toungoo and home, inflicting casualties on personnel, damaged railway trucks on the siding at Kyaukpadaung, and an oil tank at Chauk.

Other RAF fighters shot up gunposts and buildings at Akyab, machine-gunned locomotives and a train near Monywa and damaged a large river steamer and other craft on the Chindwin river.

The Japanese counter-attacks in the Chin hills were the first reported since the British began their drive. The Japanese pre-

SPEED: U. S. Army Converts Island Into Powerful Weapon

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN

AN ARMY BASE IN THE ANDREANOF ISLANDS, Dec. 10.—(Delayed)—(AP)—After a hundred days and a bombing, this looks like a different island.

When the first wave of troops pushing United States Army and air bases closer to the Japanese-occupied western Aleutians came ashore on this treeless, grassy island shortly after the first of September, I came with them.

There was literally nothing here. One abandoned trapper's shack huddled in a cove but, except for that, there was no sign that any other human had occupied the seashore, the meadows of belt-high grass of the fog-shrouded mountains. There was nothing but tundra and grass and sand.

Today, the hills by which we set our courses across country in September have suffered one of two fates—they either are civilized or gone, literally gone. If a hill suited the army, huts were built on it, guns mounted on its crest, tents pitched on its sides. If a hill was in the army's way, the army moved the hill. Frequently, it was simpler than going around.

Streams which interfered with military activities have been turned around and made to run the other way. (What will happen to the confused salmon who returns next year to the river mouth he remembers is not clear, because the mouth

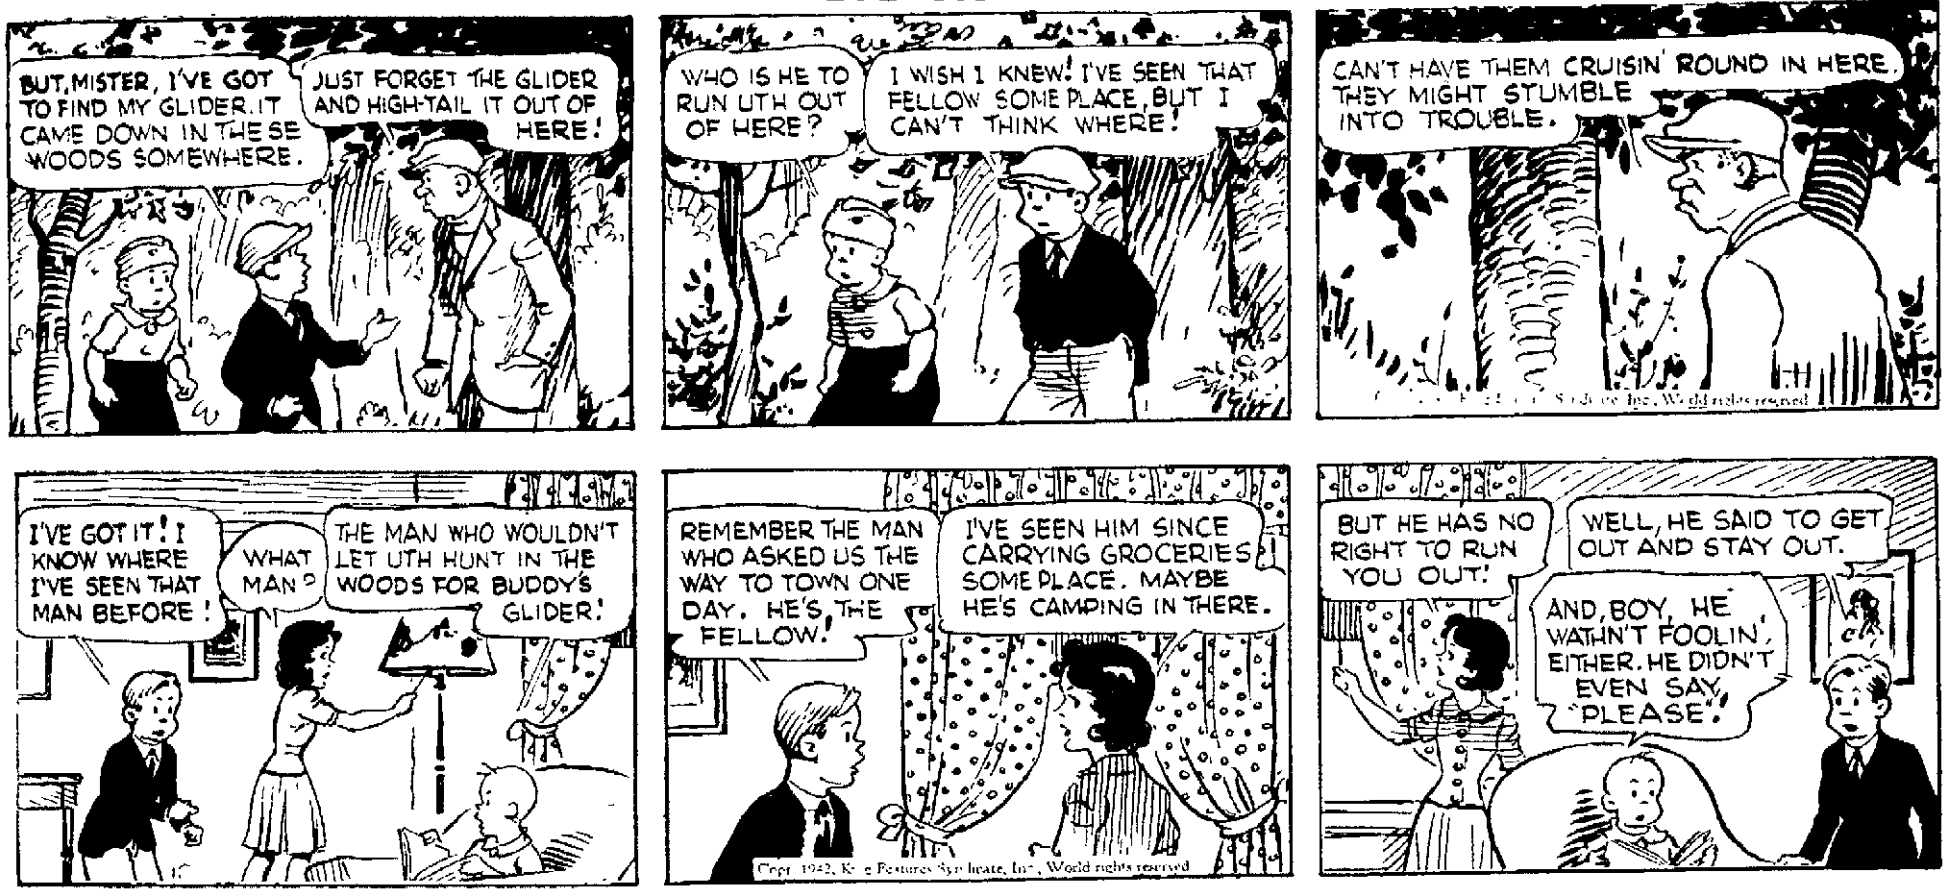
BIG SISTER



BUT, MISTER, I'VE GOT TO FIND MY GLIDER. IT CAME DOWN IN THESE WOODS SOMEWHERE.
JUST FORGET THE GLIDER AND HIGH-TAIL IT OUT OF HERE!
WHO IS HE TO RUN UTH OUT OF HERE?
I WISH I KNEW! I'VE SEEN THAT FELLOW SOME PLACE, BUT I CAN'T THINK WHERE!
CAN'T HAVE THEM CRUISIN' ROUND IN HERE. THEY MIGHT STUMBLE INTO TROUBLE.
I'VE GOT IT! I KNOW WHERE I'VE SEEN THAT MAN BEFORE!
WHAT MAN?
THE MAN WHO WOULDN'T LET UTH HUNT IN THE WOODS FOR BUDDY'S GLIDER!
REMEMBER THE MAN WHO ASKED US THE WAY TO TOWN ONE DAY. HE'S THE FELLOW!
I'VE SEEN HIM SINCE CARRYING GROCERIES SOME PLACE. MAYBE HE'S CAMPING IN THERE.
BUT HE HAS NO RIGHT TO RUN YOU OUT!
WELL, HE SAID TO GET OUT AND STAY OUT.
AND, BOY, HE WATHN'T FOOLIN', EITHER. HE DIDN'T EVEN SAY, "PLEASE"!

ANOTHER NEAR SINKING, DAD?
YEP. ANOTHER CARGO BOAT FROM OUR OWN PORT. BY GEORGE, IT BEATS ALL!
THE SEAS ARE APPARENTLY SWEPT CLEAN OF SUBS ALONG OUR COAST, YET LET A VESSEL LEAVE THIS PORT—
AND A SUB SEEMS TO BE WAITING FOR IT.
THAT CAN ONLY BE THE WORK OF SPIES, DAD!
ASSUREDLY. BUT HOW THEY OPERATE AND FROM WHERE NOBODY KNOWS, AND THEY CAN'T FIND OUT.
MY GOOD OLD GLIDER IS OUT THERE SOMEWHERE IN THAT FOREST.
I BET I COULD HAVE FOUND IT IF THAT MAN HADN'T RUN US OUT OF THERE.
CRIMEE! THERE HE IS NOW, LEAVING THE WOODS. I WONDER HOW FAR HE'S GOING!
AM I GLAD HE DIDN'T SPOT ME HANGING AROUND HERE!
LOOKS AS IF HE'S GOING INTO TOWN! LEAVING THE WOODS!
OH, BOY! WHAT A CHANCE TO GET DOWN THERE FOR A LOOK-AROUND FOR MY GLIDER!
WITH THAT MAN GONE I CAN GO DEEPER INTO THE WOODS TO LOOK FOR MY GLIDER!
I THOUGHT I'D FIND IT RIGHT ABOUT HERE. MAYBE DONNIE WAS RIGHT. MAYBE IT DID LAND IN A TREE.
WHAT'S THAT? DO I SEE IT OR DON'T I? I DO SEE SOMETHING UP THERE. BUT, BOY! HOW WILL I EVER CLIMB THAT TREE?

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — I saw show business today — "show biz" as the theatrical trade papers have it. Show biz was all over the set of "The G-String Murders," and Eddie O'Shea was most of it but not all.

Coons

There was also Barbara Stanwyck — Ruby Stevens from Brooklyn who made her name in a stage play called "Burlesque" and came to pictures and got really famous. Barbara never played real burleycue but nobody ever heard of her until she played a dramatic role in the play called Burlesque. Once she almost played a burlesque queen in moving pictures but the Hays office decided "Ball of Fire" would be just as fiery if the heroine were a night club queen. But now she's in—she's a burleycue gal created by Gypsy Rose Lee, who knows a G-String is not something on a violin.

They're changing the title of Gypsy's book because they're afraid the public will think a G-string is something on a fiddle. Once past the box-office, though, the public won't need a second guess. Most of the movie's action centers around a burlesque house, and that's where I found show biz today, including Barbara Stanwyck and Eddie O'Shea.

Eddie O'Shea is a card in any language—be it New Yorkese patter or deep-South drawlin'. Eddie wore a clown's suit and nose, and until he removed the latter I couldn't tell that he looks like a younger Spencer Tracy.

Edward Francis Michael Joseph O'Shea, 36, and born on St. Patrick's day, has traveled a rough road to stardom. Typically, he played in "lots of turkeys" on Broadway before he clicked in "The Eve of St. Mark's."

He has been in show biz since he was 14. He has played dance bands, burlesque, vaudeville, the big time and the little time—and he has also played hotels in the role of bell-hop, construction projects in the role of bricklayer, and soda fountains in the role of jerk.

"Between jobs," he says, "I always like jobs that are spectacular and let me show off. Take brick-laying. I sit up on the wall and lay the bricks and the crowds gather, and I give it a little of this and a little of that, and they gape.

"Take another time I'm on the panic and I go to a drugstore and they want soda-jerkers. They want 'em with a southern accent. So Ah'm fum Tenn'see and Ah says you-all and Ah get me a job. Soda-jerkin', or brick-layin', or acting, it's all the same. You get a crowd and you give it a little of this and a little of that . . ."

CRITICIZES LAG IN SYNTHETIC RUBBER OUTPUT

Iowa Senator to Hold More Hearings on Use of Farm Alcohol.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Guy M. Gillette (D.), Iowa, chairman of a senate agriculture subcommittee, today announced that his group will reopen hearings on the rubber production problem soon after Jan. 1 and said he expects to develop within the next 30 days the reasons behind the lagging output of alcohol from agricultural products.

First witnesses to be called before the subcommittee will be Rubber Director William M. Jeffers and officials of the WPB's alcohol division. Also on the list of witnesses is Fred Willkie, manager of Seagram's Inc., Louisville, Ky., and brother of Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 GOP presidential nominee.

"The thing that disturbs me so deeply is that with the situation so acute there should be such complacency and delay in production of synthetic rubber," Gillette said.

"It will be a year next week since the petroleum people were called in and asked to pool their interests, with a promise of a $650,000,000 subsidy, for the production of synthetic rubber. But to date the amount of synthetic rubber produced is so small that it is the cause of great concern."

Gillette commended Rubber Chief Jeffers for his activity, but he added that apparently some force is working behind the scenes to hold back the program.

"The amount of synthetic rubber available is so small that it is causing great concern," Gillette said. "We were told recently that if the construction program for production of synthetic rubber is delayed one month it will bring us below the danger line by the middle of summer in 1943. At the same time we are told that construction today is from two to three months behind. We want to find out why."

"We waited for several months to see what would be done to carry out the recommendations in the branch report. Now we feel it is time to ask why those recommendations have not been carried out and that is what we hope to develop within the next 30 days."

4 FIRE CALLS

Burning Grease, Defective Fireplace Cause Alarms.

While a North Mulberry street resident lost his Christmas eve steak in over-done style a Tracy avenue family's Yule dinner was imperiled by burning grease, according to fire department reports today.

Firemen from Central station were called to the home of S. S. Shrader, 278½ North Mulberry street, Thursday evening because the man slept while the steak was cooking, firemen said. The only casualty was the steak in a smoke-filled room.

Firemen were called to the home of O. H. Burgraf, 469 Tracy avenue, yesterday afternoon when grease deposits in an oven were ignited. No material damage was reported.

A defective fireplace at the home of H. H. Seybold, 179 Oakwood avenue, caused a Central station alarm Christmas eve but no damage was reported. No loss was reported in a call to the home of H. Long, 319 Prescott street, when fire starting from unknown origin threatened the kitchen of the home Christmas night.

FOUR WOUNDED IN CLUB FIGHT

Two Military Police Beaten In Struggle Growing From Wearing of Jacket.

(By United Press)

GREAT FALLS, Mont. — Four civilians were wounded by gunfire and two military police officers were badly beaten during a fight early today at the Oasis night club near Black Eagle.

Sheriff Andy Loberg of Cascade county said bullets from guns fired by Corp. Joe Campbell and Pvt. John MacMillan, the military policemen, wounded Irene Dotseth, Mrs. Peggy Mitchelotti, Walter Parks and Harold Smith. The two officers were beaten by the crowd in the night club.

The fight occurred shortly after midnight, the sheriff said, following an argument between the two officers and a man named Roy Gardner regarding a leather military jacket Gardner was wearing.

Campbell and MacMillan entered the Oasis night club shortly before midnight and began questioning Gardner about his right to wear the jacket. Gardner, according to authorities, told the officers the jacket was an army reject and that he had purchased it at a second hand store. The officers then ordered Gardner to leave the night club before midnight.

Bud Curwan, former Great Falls football player who was with Gardner, protested and, according to Loberg, one of the MP's knocked him down and slugged him with a revolver. The crowd rushed the officers and the shooting followed. About 12 shots were fired, according to Loberg.

FIRES WHEN CAR SMASHES INTO HOUSE, KILLS HIS STEPFATHER

(By International News Service)

YOUNGSTOWN — Seizing an antique shotgun from his bedroom wall when an automobile rammed through his front door, Winfield Sloan, 34, of nearby Lowelville, shot through the windshield of the car as it sped toward the house again and shot his stepfather to death.

That was the story Sloan told Coroner David H. Houser today as the coroner announced he would give a verdict of justifiable homicide. The dead man was Warren Wampole, 52, who, Houser learned, was "abusively drunk."

Wampole and his stepson had driven home earlier from work Christmas Eve in high spirits and the best of friends. Later, however, Houser said Wampole became intoxicated and chased his wife from their home. She ran to Sloan's home a mile away and Wampole followed in his car.

Driving without lights, Wampole reached his stepson's home and crashed the car into the front door. As he backed up to strike the house again, Sloan came to the shattered door with the shotgun and fired just before the radiator struck the door.

Sloan, whose wife and nine-year-old son were in the front room at the time, said he did not know the driver was his stepfather until after he had gone to a neighbor's home to notify Mahoning county sheriff's deputies. He said he shot at the tires of the machine but that in the darkness his aim was high and the bullet tore through the windshield and struck Wampole.

INFANT DIES

ASHLAND—Harold McKinley, nine-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger McKinley, Ashland R. D. 2, died early this morning at Samaritan hospital after a short illness. The body was removed to Fickes funeral home in Jeromesville, pending funeral arrangements.

Laff-a-Day

"While you're at it, how about putting in an order for a new mop and pail?"

George Kuntz, the nearly-blind operator of the "post exchange" in city hall, is going to have a set of false teeth as his Christmas gift from municipal employes. When the building closed Thursday for the Yule holiday his customers gathered round his counters for a program of carols. "It wasn't so bad, since nobody could really sing and none knew the words" George remarked but his unseeing eyes filled with tears when a purse containing $45 was presented by Charles Anglin, finance office clerk. Today George was arranging a sitting for his "choppers."

Shipyard workers may be hard of fist and tough of tongue but they're soft at heart, Forest L. McElfrish has told his former neighbors at Shiloh. The former Richland county construction superintendent went to Portland, Ore., a year ago to work in the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards. A few months ago he began losing his eyesight, specialists pronounced his malady incurable. As a Christmas present his fellow workers subscribed $5,500 to buy the McElfresh family a home and a magazine and candy store.

It could be the Christmas spirit or that the world is just getting better, but more likely it is the influence of the war to credit for a low Christmas attendance in jail. Only 15 prisoners had their Christmas dinner in the Richland county bastile as against 22 last year, when that figure set a new low for many years! No new inmates were added during the day as was the case in depression years when jail attaches said they believed misdemeanors were committed to insure a good holiday dinner in jail.

The Mansfield Postoffice has two new mascots, at least they're likely to become mascots, if they keep up the good work. Both are half-grown kittens, one white and the other black. The white one appeared in the building the other night from out of nowhere. All of a sudden postal employes looked up from the Christmas rush and there it was. The black one arrived through the samaritan efforts of postal clerk, Walter Teeter, who found it in the drive just after it had escaped being run over by a car. The two strays immediately reciprocated the kindness of the department by proving themselves good mousers and as a result of their aptitude along this line are becoming great pets of the department.

SENATOR SEES INQUIRY INTO '43 PROGRAM

Johnson Says Services Will Have to Justify Plans For Huge Forces.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (D.), Colo., today predicted that the new congress will call on the army and navy to justify the huge program for a 9,700,000 man fighting force by the end of 1943.

Promising to bring the raging manpower controversy in Washington into the open, Johnson said that the call upon the armed forces will be made through the senate military affairs committee or through the appropriations committees of both the house and senate.

Johnson had this to say:

"The army and navy are going to have to support their demands for a larger army. I don't blame the army—it is right for it to seek what it can.

"But the constitution directs the congress to raise and equip an army. It is the responsibility of congress, not that of the president or the war department."

Under the present program, the army is expected to reach 7,500,000 men in 1943 with the navy and other branches raising the total to 9,700,000 men.

A great deal of criticism over the projected size of the army has been uttered by congressmen on and off the record in Washington for weeks. Fears were expressed that the army never would have enough equipment to arm 7,500,000 men. There also was controversy over whether a total armed strength of 9,700,000 men would drain the nation's manpower from vital war factories, farms and essential civilian production.

There also was the question of shipping for the A. E. F.'s which are being sent to all corners of the world. This was emphasized by Sen. Johnson. He stated;

"They will have to show that they have the shipping and equipment to efficiently use such a huge force. Whatever is needed congress will give, but it ought to know that the army can be equipped and put into the battle lines.

"The thing that I am most concerned about is the unbalancing of manpower by diversion of men from the farms and factories."

800 Amish Undergo Vaccinations In Smallpox Outbreak

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — Approximately 800 inhabitants of the Amish colony in Holmes county have been vaccinated in the past few days, although the sect usually opposed the practice, as a result of an outbreak of smallpox in the community, Dr. H. R. Markwith, state health director, said today.

He said he had traced four new cases of the disease and said it might have been Mrs. Anna Weaver of Fredericksburg, wife of an Amish minister, who brought the disease to Ohio after a three-weeks trip to Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland.

The director said the woman was in good health when she left Ohio. She and her husband visited an Amish colony in Pennsylvania where some members of the wedding party developed smallpox.

"Smallpox is a disease that can be controlled absolutely through vaccination," Markwith said, "and the response of the people of the Holmes county Amish community has been gratifying."

ASSASSIN DIES FOR KILLING OF ADMIRAL DARLAN

Taken Before Firing Squad In North Africa; Council to Name New French Head.

sination was part of a plot but informed circles in Algiers were dubious.

It was generally believed that the murder of the French leader, who unexpectedly shifted allegiance to the Allied cause, had been inspired and possibly engineered by Axis agents.

French authorities were making a thorough investigation of the background of the youth, described as being about 20 years old—despite his claim of sole responsibility for the crime.

While the purpose of the assassination undoubtedly was aimed at creating disunity in French ranks, it appeared to have achieved the opposite results. The French national council, composed of administrative and military leaders of the colonial empire, was assembling in Algiers for a meeting today to name a successor to Darlan as high commissioner for North Africa.

Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, France's outstanding military hero and commander-in-chief of the colonial military forces, was considered the likeliest figure for the post. Other possibilities were Gen. Auguste Nogues, governor-general of Morocco, and Pierre Boisson, high commissioner of French West Africa and Dakar.

Gen. Giraud was named to command the French armed forces by Darlan after he joined the Allied cause. Giraud's escape from France to North Africa was planned by American and British military authorities, and he also was believed to be acceptable to Gen. Charles DeGaulle, leader of the Fighting French movement.

DeGaulle and his followers were adamantly opposed to Darlan and had refused cooperation with him despite all his overtures and disavowals of political ambitions.

Thousands viewed the body of the murdered admiral as it lay in state at the Catholic Cathedral of Algiers. Guards of French soldiers, marines and sailors stood guard at the bier.

Allied military authorities were deeply shocked by the crime. Gen. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief, who had carried out the negotiations that won Darlan's allegiance, immediately conveyed condolences to Mme. Darlan upon his return from a Christmas tour of the front in Tunisia.

"Admiral Darlan rendered services of vast importance to our armed forces," Gen. Eisenhower declared.

Authorities still were baffled by the circumstances of the young assassin's entrance to the heavily guarded summer palace in the hills overlooking Algiers. One unconfirmed report said he wore a French military uniform.

Axis Radio Tries to Cash In' on Killing

(By United Press)

Axis radios did their best today o profit by the assassination of dmiral Jean Francois Darlan.

"Otherwise," Brinon was quoted, "Giraud is an empty headed fellow and at the same time a convinced reactionary, royalist and jesuit pupil."

The German official news agency uid Darlan—who had a French my at his command—recently sked Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenower, Allied commander in chief, r "protection, since he knew he as endangered."

Another official German agency oadcast said that President oosevelt's denunciation of the assassination "expressed Roosevelt's fury because Churchill had warted his plans regarding orth Africa by murder."

'ichy Unconcerned 'ver Assassination is now a couple of miles away and on another ocean bay.)

For ten days in September, an overturned canvas boat being made to do for quarters brought envious glances from lieutenants and colonels alike. It was as roomy as the average cave built in a single night, and considerably more dry.

Today, the officer who does not sleep in a winterized tent with a coal stove—or a sound building with oil heat and electric lights—either has absolutely no influence or is assigned to the far suburbs of this 100 per cent military city.

Where there were no trails, there is now a network of usable roads.

The airfield was a dream from the beginning. Four days after the landing, a plane touched its wheels to the new field. A bare 12 days later, it was the starting point for an integrated raid which began ruining the Japanese air force and land installations at Kiska.

In September, a comparatively few men were for days at the mercy of any Japanese planes which might have come across the hills. When a plane did come, weeks later, it was too late. A few bombs were dropped, a few soldiers, weary with months of training and building, got their first view of an enemy aircraft. But no damage was done, no personnel either injured or killed.

The men who came in September are the old settlers, and each of them is ready at any opportunity to tell tall tales of how it was in the old days.

Church Questions To be Disc

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—save gasoline and rubber for military uses by doing no unnecessary driving.

Now that there's a nice big pipeline to convey oil to the east, all that's needed is a pump—someone should have thought of that.

Who's to call attention to the blunders? According to Robert Quillen, "If a Republican does it, he's playing politics; if a Democrat does it he is disloyal."

Tragedy Ends Darlan Controversy

THE FAST-MOVING and strangely mixed war action in North Africa passed into a new phase with dramatic suddenness on the eve of Christmas when bullets from an assassin's gun ended the life of Admiral Jean Darlan, the man whose recent abrupt shift from Axis to Allied support gave such a peculiar twist to the African situation.

Enough time has not yet elapsed to clear the picture of forthcoming events in Africa, but what seems apparent is that the elimination of Darlan, tragic as were the circumstances, will become effective in cementing all Fighting Frenchmen into a unit of resistance against the Axis, with realization that it is only through full co-operation with the United Nations that hope for the restoration of freedom to France can ever be brought about.

However well-founded the suspicions against Darlan may have been, it is obvious that his action in ending French opposition to Allied occupation of West Africa, including Dakar, prevented what would otherwise have been a bitter struggle, with loss of many lives.

The assassination of Darlan was, as President Roosevelt said, "murder in the first degree," and the wonder is that a person in such a recognizedly dangerous spot should have been so unguarded as to leave the way open for an assailant to reach him easily.

Whatever may develop as the motive behind the murder of Admiral Darlan, whether it was Axis-inspired or no more than the insane act of an irresponsible youth, adjustments will quickly be made under changed leadership of the French in North Africa and the war will proceed without interruption. Men come and go, but the great principles for which the United Nations are fighting live on, and the war must continue to eventual victory.

Tribute To Holiday Heroes

THERE are two groups of heroes in what we call the "Christmas holidays" who deserve more honor and recompense than they usually get. They are the sales people in the stores and the postmen who deliver the Christmas mail. Without them the public festival of spending and giving would be impossible.

It is hardly necessary to say that for them the weeks immediately preceding Christmas are not holidays. And by the time the buying and delivering are over, they are probably so tired that they care little for anything but a good, long sleep. The postmen may not get much of that, because they have so large an accumulation of late mail to deliver.

There ought to be some way by which these much-enduring people, human sacrifices to the Christmas spirit, could have for themselves a larger share of holiday joy. The least that an ordinarily humane public can do is to be as considerate of them as possible during the shopping and delivering period, and to express some kind of substantial appreciation of their services.

An Expensive Introduction

OSTENTATIOUS display of wealth is never admirable, but it is more than a mere evidence of bad taste when it occurs at a time when millions of "free and equal" people in a democracy are scrimping and saving to buy war bonds, pay income taxes and otherwise contribute to the national war effort.

Such a champagne-caviar party as was thrown in an elite Washington hotel last week—to introduce the new Mrs. Harry Hopkins to New Deal bigwigs—is a case in point.

The affair was put on by a friend of the Hopkins family, at a cost approximating $3,000, or about $40 each for the 70 or 80 guests.

The party was described from Washington as "reminiscent of the splendor of czars and emperors in their palmy days."

An interesting descriptive paragraph revealed: "French champagne of 1926 vintage flowed without stint all through the dinner and the hours of dancing that followed.

It was also made a part of the report that Leon Henderson, who resigned as head of the OPA "because of a lame back," was present and danced until 4 a. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins live in the White House. It will be recalled that it was Mr. Hopkins who recently wrote a magazine article in which he told Americans about the many sacrifices they will have to make because of war requirements.

It isn't the fact that $3,000 was spent for the party that is disturbing—it is the idea that under present conditions, and wartime needs, ANY group of people, and especially those associated with New Deal policies, should deem such costly frivolity proper.

The American people have a right to expect practice of their preachments from Washington employes in the government service.

Hitler Flouts International Law

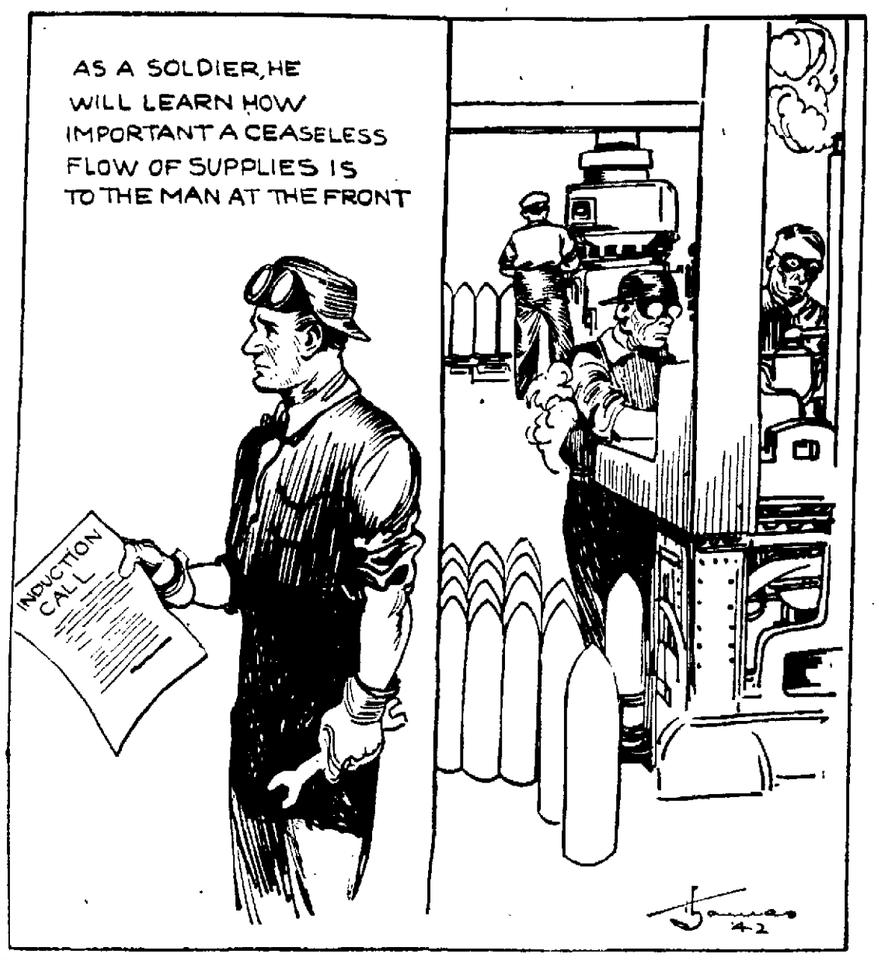
UNTIL this war the rules of action under international law received at least lip service from the German government. In 1914-1918 that government committed many acts condemned by the moral sentiment of the world. Chief among them were the violation of Belgian neutrality and the adoption of unlimited submarine warfare. In both cases Germany took great pains to justify herself, alleging previous British violations of international law, or twisting her actions so that they might seem to conform to the standards set by civilized nations.

All this is a thing of the past. Hitler has manifested his contempt for international law in no way more strikingly than by his complete silence about it. His many speeches give no indication that such a code ever existed. Might is the one standard recognized, legal right is nowhere.

International law was a feeble plant at best. It is doubtful whether it can survive its rough treatment from the Nazis.

It is again being repeated—possibly for emphasis—that there's plenty of coffee, IN BRAZIL.

WHEN THE FACTORY WORKER GOES TO WAR



How Rising Wages Affect Prices

This is the second of four articles prepared by the Office of War Information to explain in simple terms the government program for economic stabilization.

OF THE seven points in the president's program for economic stabilization, the average person is most interested in the stabilization of wages and salaries.

It means that his wage or salary shall remain where it was on September 15 with certain exceptions. It means that no person shall receive a salary of more than $25,000 a year after he or she pays federal income taxes and obtains certain allowances.

The theory behind it is simple. If prices stay where they are, and profits are limited by heavier taxes, there is little need for higher wages.

The president's order set those rules. Carrying them out is something else again. Here is how it is being done.

The National War Labor board is given the right to control all wages and all salaries except those salaries paid to supervisory or professional employes not represented by unions. All other salaried employes are under the jurisdiction of the commissioner of internal revenue.

The board cannot approve increases except where necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate substandards of living, to correct gross inequities, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

There are some exceptions.

A man who works in a small shop or business employing eight persons or less, for example. His pay can be raised. Such raises won't cause inflation.

Farm laborers, too, are not required to get approval.

But, for the most part, the board has the authority to say "yes" or "no." In most cases, it will say "no."

A man or woman can still get ahead. A worker may be promoted to a better job, and, of course, from then on receives the higher pay which goes with his job. That does not increase the company's expenses. They still pay the same wages as before for the better job. There is just a new man in the job.

A man or woman can still earn a merit raise.

An employe can get a pay raise based on length of service.

If the company has a plan for granting bonuses for greater production, he has a right to earn more money that way.

Apprentices or trainees will continue to get their usual raises.

If these raises are ones which the employer has been in the practice of granting, he can go on making them without board approval. They do not increase his expenses or put more money in circulation.

It is the general wage increase that is curbed. The raise that creates greater expenses and leads to higher prices and inflation.

THERE is a sound reason behind this whole wage and salary stabilization order. Without it there would be no stopping inflation. The reason: there is a growing shortage of manpower. Without control, here's what would happen:

Industry, working at top speed trying to produce enough on time, wants more workers. But there are few available. Most are already employed. There's one way to get them, though. Pay more than the other employer does.

So wages are boosted. But the employer who loses the men needs them, too. So he in turn boosts pay rates to get men. Workers come to him from other industries. In self defense, the other industries raise wages.

At first, the workers might think these higher wages were clear gain. But soon reactions would set in.

The payment of higher wages naturally increases the cost of producing something. Soon those production costs, if wage increases continued, would be pressing the price at which the article sells. If the ceiling price were enforced, the manufacturer would soon be producing at a loss and would face bankruptcy.

The only way out for him would be to sell at a higher price. But if he succeeds in getting his ceiling price lifted, the cost to the merchant is increased and soon he, too, would face the same situation. So he, too, would either be forced to go out of business or raise prices. And this brings the price increase right back to the worker.

This would happen to article after article until presently the lid would blow off, and away would go prices — soaring higher and higher with wages unable to keep up.

The worker would pay.

And in the war plants, the situation would be no better. The shifts of workers from one plant to another in their pursuit of higher wages would disrupt production and might cause us to lose the war.

To guard against this, wage stabilization had to be put into effect to protect all the people. It goes hand in hand with price ceilings, rationing and taxation to insure that the cost of living stays where it is.

The job of stabilizing wages—of determining what is fair and just, and what isn't—is a tough one.

To do it, the War Labor board is setting up offices throughout the country.

If an employer wants to raise wages, he goes to the nearest of the 100 offices of the Wage and Hour and Public Contracts division of the Department of Labor. This office may determine whether the salary or wage adjustment may be made without approval. If board approval is needed, they refer the application to the regional office of the board. The regional office then makes a ruling. The employer may accept this ruling or appeal it to a regional panel composed of representatives of labor, management and the public. They can even appeal that decision to the board.

It is a democratic way of deciding. It is aimed at the protection of everyone. That is what wage stabilization means.

How I Settle Trouble

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE discovered a curious and comforting thing about trouble. I have discovered that if I can settle a trouble INSIDE MYSELF it's settled for good. Thereafter the pesty thing has no power to confuse or molest me.

That doesn't mean, however, that I can always triumph over trouble in the eyes of the world. It doesn't imply that by some trick of will power, I can manage to pay off the mortgage, or heal a desperate illness, or stop an enemy's malice.

To the contrary, I may seem to fail completely, outwardly. The mortgage may be foreclosed. The illness may increase; enemy may become madder and meaner.

YET, NEVERTHELESS, I CAN, IF I WILL, CONQUER TROUBLE, REGARDLESS OF CIRCUMSTANCE, I CAN BE CONFIDENT AND HAPPY AND AT PEACE WITHIN MYSELF.

And by what miracle is this to be accomplished?

By no miracle, at all, but simply through the operation of a natural function of my spirit—a function which is as normal as the process of digestion or blood circulation.

I CAN CONQUER TROUBLE BY CONTROLLING THE ATTITUDE OF MY OWN MIND.

It is not possible for anyone to control all the circumstances of his life, but it is always possible to control one's own attitude toward those circumstances. And that is the really important thing. That is the thing which determines the happiness or unhappiness, success or failure of one's life.

It isn't what happens that counts. It's the way I feel about it. AND I CAN FEEL ABOUT ANYTHING IN ANY WAY I CHOOSE.

For instance, there's that mortgage. I can, if I wish, feel that the mortgage is the most important thing in life. I can feel that nothing matters to me as much as my small house and few acres of land, and that if these are wiped out I'm finished.

Or I can, if I wish, feel that I myself am the most important thing in my life, and that possessions are of little importance as long as I retain my own courage, faith, enthusiasm and self-respect. And I can resolutely refuse to let a foreclosed mortgage cramp my soul's fighting style.

I can do this about a mortgage. I can do this about anything. It is possible for me, for you, for any normal person, to do this thing in the face of any calamity—even impending death.

Where's the proof?

All around you.

No need even, to look for evidence to those great lives that flare like beacons down the dark aisles of history. There's the woman who lives in your own block.

Nothing very unusual about that woman's bitter life. A worthless husband; a dead child; endless, weary labor to feed the little ones that are left. You know a dozen women whose experience is almost identical. But those other women took the count. This woman wouldn't!

All of which doesn't mean that trouble is a good thing. But it's an inevitable thing. Sooner or later we all must meet it. So then? So then it's up to us.

TROUBLE IS AS WE TAKE IT. TROUBLE IS WHAT WE MAKE IT. NOTHING CAN BREAK US IF WE REFUSE TO BE BROKEN. NOTHING CAN STOP US SAVE OUR OWN SURRENDER.

Rationing Still Holds Spotlight; Other Shortages Disturb OPA

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOUGH LEON HENDERSON as OPA head huffed and puffed the nation out of its complacency, onto a wartime economy of strict and sometimes politically inexpedient rationing. He didn't make many friends in congress, admitted he lacked politeness and had a "low boiling point."

Now Leon Henderson is on the way out; on the way into the rationing job is "a very gentle gentleman," ex-Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan, a Democratic casualty in the Republican wind that blew up in November.

Despite his ailing back, ostensible cause for his resignation, Henderson promised to "really get tough" in his last few days at OPA by cracking down on gasoline bootleggers.

In this crusade he had cause to expect public support, for a weekend shutdown on all A, B, and C gas cards in 17 eastern states and reduction of B and C cards from four to three gallons per unit made leg-weary motorists realize how black markets could increase the wear and tear on their feet.

A nationwide coldwave spotlighted fuel oil rationing, brought back memories of heatless days in the cold winters of World War I. Demands from householders and their congressmen for adjustment in fuel oil rationing kept the rationing situation and OPA officials in a dither.

Ceilings Up.

Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes saw no hope for lessening of the restrictions upon the use of gasoline and fuel oil, although steps were promised to improve rationing methods, increase the supply.

Byrnes moved to study simplification, if possible, of rationing procedure and then OPA announced that beginning in January retail food ceilings would be standardized in each community according to the type of store: Supermarkets, because of smaller overhead per item, will have one set of ceilings; chain store limits will be a bit higher and independent grocers may charge still higher ceilings.

OPA's house of ration cards had only two quiet rooms—those of sugar and coffee rationing. Still unrationed and steadily worsening was the meat situation. No matter what cut of beef she asked for, the housewife found it was rare. Growing equally scarce was butter and other dairy products. Henderson could wish his successor good luck with the knowledge that he would need both it and all his politeness.

At Home

Job Law Proposed.

Many a Washington expert believes America's all-out war effort will not be capped until the drafting of labor is added to the wartime emergencies of rationing, unprecedented taxes, selective military service.

During the week, the nation moved a step closer to that stage, with the preparation of a bill by Grenville Clark, authority on selective service and close friend of the president. Clark's bill would provide for compulsory assignment of workers to war industries --after calls for volunteers failed to produce necessary manpower.

Still studying the subject, Washington remained mum, was expected to let Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt show what he can do under existing powers, before shaking the legislative stick.

'On Time' In Wartime.

When the government shook down the national economy to prevent inflation, one of the first features to go was installment buying.

During the week the government edged back toward installment buying tied up in a wartime-postwar system also directed at preventing inflation by skimming off the nation's excess purchasing power.

Washington sources said the plan would allow persons to go to their auto, refrigerator of furnace dealer, arrange for the postwar delivery of the product. For payments, the purchaser would put up cash or war bonds, plus the customary carrying or financing charges.

With the end of the war, such purchasers would receive priority on the delivery of the products—a point to be considered, says Washington, in face of the anticipated rush for these things when production is resumed.

Holiday Report.

Americans fought their way through one of the most tremendous Christmas shopping crushes in the country's history, then settled down for the main event. To many, it was a strange and lonely day, that first real wartime Christmas.

Farm boys from the south and middle west, city boys from the east and west, were marking the day in a half-dozen or more foreign lands. But from the government and other agencies, the folks at home learned:

The Navy dined in style, with a menu that included a million and a quarter pounds of turkey, as well as mountainous supplies of ham, potatoes, vegetables, pie, ice cream.

In England, Christmas week invitations from British families exceeded the number of U. S. soldiers who could get leave, 50 to 1.

In North Africa, U. S. soldiers found Christmas trees, but no decorations, agreed they wanted no Christmas anyway—just letters from home.

In London, every U. S. enlisted men of Jewish faith volunteered for Christmas duty, enabling hundreds of those of Christian faith to have special leave.

Abroad

Back to Burma.

A week ago, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's long plans to retake Burma had reached the action stage. With virtually no fanfare, spearheads of his million-man (mostly Indian) army plunged across the Indian border into Burma. The weather was good, as Burmese weather goes, the army was newly equipped, and it had completed extensive maneuvers to test its endurance and jungle-fighting skill.

In the first phase of the operation the army struck swiftly toward Akyab, an air base 350 miles from Rangoon, and by midweek its advance was virtually unimpeded. Absence of Japanese opposition indicated either that the Japanese had been caught completely by surprise, or intended to make no serious defense until Rangoon.

Wavell's headquarters emphasized this was no "invasion" of Burma; rather, it said, the move was a major reconnaissance that might blossom on a larger scale if conditions warranted.

But no matter how dwarfed was the Burma operation in the light of Allied offensives in other theaters, it highlighted again the fact that the Allies are on the move.

Turn About.

It was a potent weapon for Hitler—the initiative. As long as he held it, he wielded it expertly, keeping the enemy guessing, baffling and goading him with a war of nerves.

But Hitler has lost it, and during the week it was the Allies' turn to jab, feint, hit and run in Europe and the African sphere.

From London came again the story of the Commandos—how they sifted through German defenses in the Bizerte area, came within five miles of the city itself. An undisclosed number of Americans participated, and the raiders suffered an undisclosed number of casualties, but they also inflicted losses on the enemy. What they went for, they found out: The Germans are strongly entrenched in the Bizerte-Tunis area.

Across France and to Munich, the heart of Nazidom, went Britain's massive four-engined Lancaster bombers, raining two-ton block-busters on airplane and submarine engine plants, railway lines, locomotive works and munitions factories. It was the prelude, said America's Maj. Gen. Henry F. Miller, to a growing air mission against the Axis which will be accomplished "within a very brief period."

In Tunisia, the Allies claimed air superiority, which they promised to hold until the resumption of land fighting, slowed by bad weather and the necessity for bringing up supplies.

To the east, in Libya, Gen. Montgomery's Eighth army still pursued the fleeing Afrika Korps, rolled into Sirte, 180 miles beyond El Agheila, and pushed its advance patrols to Misurata—to find that Rommel appearently planned no stand there. The marshal's apparent decision to speed for Tunisia, there to join Axis troops flown in from Italy, pointed to a major clash in the making - probably the one to decide mastery of North Africa.

To Sabang: Boom!

The Pacific holds bitter memories for the British navy. There, at the outset of the war a year ago; two of His Majesty's finest capital ships—the Prince of Wales and the Repulse—plunked to the bottom under the assault of Japanese aircraft.

During the week the Royal navy handed the Japs the first installment in the pay-off of that score when planes operating from the aircraft carrier Illustrious hammered the north Sumatra installation of Sabang in the East Indies, 800 miles east of Ceylon.

British sources said the operation was successful, entailed no British losses. Experts guessed the Royal navy was beginning to concentrate in the Bay of Bengal, soon would be able to land additional blows on Jap holdings.

China Sea Horror.

Belatedly, another story of Japanese disregard for prisoners reached Allied sources during the week. Three Britons arrived in Chungking, told of the sinking of a Japanese prison transport in the China sea, with a loss of half the 1,800 British and Australians aboard. To some of the victims, death came as a relief after days of incredibly bad sanitary conditions and widespread illness. The ship was torpedoed, abandoned by the Japanese, and some prisoners were shot in the water as they attempted to reach nearby Japanese auxiliary vessels.

Timely Editorial

Too Modest.

Sometimes we think the modesty and reserve conventional in returned fighting men are overdone, in that the effect is to make it all sound too easy.

The Army Air Corps' captain's account of how on Malta a pencil is used to determine the course of a falling bomb was fascinatingly simplified. One just sights along the pencil at the descending object, which, if coming your way, will appear to be sliding right down the pencil, and rapidly. This makes dodging a cinch for any wideawake individual who sees the bomb first and has a pencil handy.

But the account failed to mention how a novice might keep the pencil steady enough for a satisfactory observation, or how, in the event of two bombs falling, the same party in interest would go about manipulating two pencils simultaneously.

Sometimes we think it would help us stay-at-homes to appreciate our advantages, if the boys who have been there would let themselves go a little on what they have seen and experienced.—Detroit News.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Even though I knew that Gus was always scenting trouble, whether or not it developed, I know also that on several occasions he had justified his gloomy outlook.

"Of course, Gus. I'll repeat to him everything you tell me, and in your own words," I said.

"Your words better," he said with his wide, friendly smile.

"Thank you, Gus," I said, "but what is troubling you?"

"There's two things," he said, "but the one that bothers me most is something about that man your father had us chain up yesterday while he talked to the girl."

"Yes," I said, "I know the man you mean."

"Well, he keeps asking for things. First, a knife to cut his food. That we not let him have; we cut it up and give him spoon to eat it with. Then he want pen and ink and paper, and your father say no pen and ink, but let him have pencil and paper. If he offers me money—I'm his guard, see—to get a letter out for him, your father tell me to say no first and second times, but after, when he offer big money, take letter.

"Your father want me to pretend to go easy with him a little, not too much, and to tell man your father too hard on folks sometimes; that I no like some things he does.

"Well," and Gus drew a long breath before he hurried on, for we were very near the hotel, "the man get the pencil and paper. He write and tear it up, and write again and tear it up, then write a lot and put in envelope and seal it. Then he gather up all torn pieces and put in another envelope and seal it, and put that inside his shirt.

Prisoner Is Foxy.

"He didn't ask me yet to get any letter out for him. I think he too foxy to try that till he size me up awhile and think he softens me up.

"Your father he say let him have anything he want that he can't hurt himself with, so when he ask to read paper, the New York ——, I send out and get him one."

I stirred with sudden interest. That was the paper in whose personal column we had inserted the code personal message from Mary, which we hoped Marion would ese.

"Go on," I said.

"Well, Gus said, "I got him the paper, but the way he snatch it from me make me think plenty, so I scoot around quick to peephole in ceiling where you can look down to that room. All the rest of the paper is lying all round the floor, but he has one page spread on table and is going down one column with his finger. Then he stop and laugh out loud.

Gets Another Paper.

"'Good old Tony!' he says. Then he get out pencil and paper again and start making little marks, looking at that page like it was arithmetic book and he do an example."

"Gus," I said then, "would you know that page of newspaper again if you saw it—I mean, one just like it, from another copy of the same paper?"

"I dunno," Gus said doubtfully. "Maybe, but maybe I couldn't."

"It's worth trying, anyway," I decided. "Please get out here, go to the nearest newsstand and get the New York ——. Which did he have—today's paper?"

"Yes, ma'am, but then you be alone in the car, and Joe will be busy driving."

"Nonsense!" I said sharply. "I'll lock the car door and you'll be gone only a minute."

"You promise you won't get out till I come back?"

"Of course not," I replied. "I want to look at that paper, and to have you look at it, before I take any message to my father about it. He will want to see that page, I am sure."

DINA CASHMAN + + +

CHAPTER XIX

"I'm so sorry about this," she whispered, getting back into the car after a wretched interval, wiping her colorless lips and her wet eyes. "I've been like this every morning for a month now." She smiled. "So it wasn't the drive."

"You're not being let off anything, are you?"

"Not much."

"I've been thinking about our marriage said Rogers. I think the thing for me to do is stop in at your house tonight, meet your people, explain that we've been married, and then take you home."

"You wouldn't tell them—about me, I mean?"

"Oh, no, no; I won't tell them anything, ever, that you don't want me to. You don't want to do that?" he asked, impressed by her visible distress. "Why not? It's the only dignified way, Geraldine, for both of us."

"But it's not fair to you!" she burst out suddenly, red-cheeked. "You—you're doing this for me. I can't do anything for you! My father—and my sisters, maybe—they might come to the house—and I don't know what they'd want or what I'd do, and I couldn't stand them bothering you and apologizing for them! Because" – Dina struggled on against a rising tide of wild tears now—"I love them. I can't help it—"

"Calm down," he said firmly, interrupting her by closing a heavy, gloved hand over hers. "I'll take care of that if it comes along. I'm asking you to do what I want you to do. I like the idea of having a sweet woman at the head of my table, someone to talk to, someone to listen to me. I've not wanted to marry since Anne died until Aline came along and all the old feelig came back. Perhaps I've never wanted to marry at all. But I like company. I'll like very much showing you stamps, taking you on a walk now and then, having you round. You needn't worry about me."

Dina considered it. She was tired now, her face pale and strained.

"I'll do what you want me to do," she said simply.

"Then we'll stop for a few minutes at your house and go our way. We'll tell your people, and for everyone else it can filter out by degrees. I haven't much hope that we can keep it a secret very long," Rogers went on, "and we don't want newspaper people prowling around your father's place—or mine."

"I should hope not!" Dina agreed fervently

"I'll go in for a moment tonight, meet them all, and then we'll go off on a supposed honeymoon. Don't worry," he added unsmilingly as the color rushed into Dina's face; "what I feel for you isn't that sort of thing at all. I know where your affections are. Instead of Del Monte we'll go home; Mrs. Bucket will have dinner ready at half-past seven or bring you up a tray. And that's another thing," he added, "about Mrs. Bucket. She spoke of you this morning as 'Mrs. Holland.' She asked if Mrs. Holland would like her breakfast in bed, said she knew you had been feeling ill in the mornings."

A little after six o'clock, they reached Railway Flats. At Dina's somewhat timid suggestion Hall and the car were left waiting on the main street of Bonita, some three blocks away.

The Cashmans were at supper. Dina had known what sort of a picture must greet Rogers' eyes as she opened the door, but even her imagination and familiarity could hardly have painted the details more glaringly

Everything that was characteristic of supper-time flurry and disorder was there; her father, mustached and lean and suspicious, was in his shirt sleeves, his chair squared about from the table, a handle-less cup in his fingers. Her mother, incredibly frowsy of hair, a saucepan in one hand and a spoon in the other was standing by the stove.

The children were scattered about; little Donny and Myrna and Dooley on chairs, Art half standing, half leaning against the sink, Lou beside Myrna. Ellner had stopped at the bedroom door in what was evidently a tearful retreat from the room.

The air was thick with smoke, grease, and steam; every surface of chair or table or sinkboard that could be used was crowded with odds and ends of food, dirty pans and knives, dishcloths, paper bags, sweaters, schoolbooks, rubbers, plates.

"Mama," said Dina without preamble, closing the door behind herself and Rogers and backing up against him, "this is Mr Holland, and he and I were married today!"

An electrified silence followed this announcement, then John Cashman spoke heavily.

"What are you saying?"

The children set up an excited babble of questions, exclamations, and cries of surprise, through which Dina's mother said sharply:

"Why, Dina, what do you mean by going and doing a thing like that!"

The girl glanced up over her shoulder at Rogers. His appearance was not entirely reassuring. He had worn an old raincoat on this uncertain day; his fair, thin hair was mussed about his round, owlish face; his eyes bulged behind their strong glasses

"We were married in Reno at two o'clock today," he said. "Witnesses and all. What were the witnesses' names, Geraldine?"

"I don't remember." In a sudden rush of love for them all, longing to be back in her old place with them all, she had gone to her mother and put her arms about the slatternly figure.

"Well, I have it here." Rogers took a folded paper from his pocket; afterward she thought how deliberately he had managed that her father should see this evidence of the marriage, but at the time it seemed strangely unimportant.

"Married?" Dina's father was demanding with hostility. He hesitated, weakened. "You've got money to provide for her properly, I suppose?"

"Why, you said Vere was a college boy, Dina!" her mother wailed. "I don't know what possest you to do such a thing! Why on earth didn't you—"

"I'm not Vere," Rogers interpolated; "I'm his uncle."

"His uncle!" Mrs. Cashman gasped.

"I don't understand it and I don't like it," Dina's father said without any particular emphasis.

"It seems funny you marrying anybody's uncle!" Myrna put in.

"I guess Dina knows what she's doing," Art said in his raw boy's voice. He walked over to her and kissed her, said: "Congratulations, Sis."

Dina clung to him.

"I'm sorry if I upset any of you," she stammered, turning to face the circle. "We just decided it lately."

"I assure you I'll take very good care of her," Rogers told them, looking at her father as he spoke.

"Well, I don't doubt that, don't doubt that," John Cashman muttered, mollified. "Here, sit down."

"And let us get you something to eat." The situation was reducing itself to elements Dina's mother understood. "Dooley," she said, "you run over to Meyer's—he'll be open—"

"No, no, no!" Dina protested. "No thanks just the same. We're going home for dinner." Rogers looked immense and alien as he stood there among them in his raincoat, peering through his glasses.

"Oh, Dina, don't go away!" Lou wailed. Dina kissed her.

"I'll come back," she began to feel tired and weak; she had had eight hours of driving on a changeable spring day; the motion of the car still was with her.

What Well-Dressed Sub-Debs Like

Left, Joyce Reynolds wearing check skirt, twin sweaters for campus; velveteen frock for tea dance; dance dress of yellow and black taffeta.

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated News Writer

This season there are three distinct ways that the 'teen age miss wants to look. During the school day and for active and spectator sports she wants to be as casual as possible, and feels that it is exceptionally bad taste to be the least bit overdressed.

She is definitely the tweedy type until after 5 o'clock, and goes in for wool skirts, long-sleeved cardigans, plaids and man-tailored coats. But come the hour of dates, she wants to go completely feminine and appear in smart little street-length dresses, or stream-lined dancing frocks that have a touch of sophistication.

In the three photographs shown above we are giving a good example of what the sub-deb or younger sister prefers for around-the-clock wear.

Joyce Reynolds models these outfits which include an afternoon, evening and daytime dress.

The campus costume is one that goes in for lots of color. Brilliant shades are used for both sweater and skirt ensemble. The broken check skirt is of beige and watermelon red, and is topped off with a twin sweater set of the same brilliant shade of red. Self-colored bindings of grosgrain ribbon mark the front of the collarless sweater.

For teadancing the younger set likes velveteen. And it is a favorite wartime fabric since it's dressy and warm, yet made of cotton. This frock is in brilliant cardinal red. It has the new longer fitted waistline, and a skirt with gathers across the front. Its only trimming note is a gold kid flower. A tiny pillbox hat, worn back on the head, completes the costume.

The dancing dress has a fitted bodice and yoke of banana yellow taffeta. The skirt is of black taffeta. The bands of cut-out braid add a flattering note. The only jewelry worn with the gown is a string of pearls, and roses set off the youthful coiffure.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, December 27.

Sunday's horoscope, while harmonious and pleasant for spiritual, social and friendly contacts, with much activity in public, group and community interests, in other relations may be noted for sudden surprises or upheavals of an unhappy and unprofitable nature. There may be strife, estrangements, probably precipitated by erratic emotions.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of difficult situations arising suddenly and separations threaten, if rash, impulsive and erratic conduct be indulged. Make changes with care.

A child born on this day may be erratically inclined, emotional and impulsive, changeable and restive.

For Monday, December 28.

Monday's astrological augury is not an entirely favorable or encouraging one. While there is stimulus for energetic and constructive work, with the assistance of those in influential positions and also with public or group cooperation, yet a tendency toward rash judgments may exist.

Those whose birthday it is may reap some advancement and progress if they will keep firm curb on tongue and temper, emotional waywardness, erratic and explosive outbursts. Influential friends may be ready to assist and confer favors if genuine effort and constraint be demonstrated.

A child born on this day may be erratic, temperamental, difficult to understand, provoking many difficulties and reversals for itself. Yet it should have sympathetic friends in high places.

Benny and Ann Sheridan play the couple who are almost swallowed up amidst piles of falling plaster and general debris. Charles Coburn, Hattie McDaniel and William Tracy are in the cast.

Navy Thriller.

Timely story of the men who battle the U-boats, "The Navy Comes Through," opening Sunday at the Madison co-stars Pat O'Brien and George Murphy in the leading roles. O'Brien appears as a hard-boiled chief gunner's mate of a navy crew aboard a merchant vessel while Murphy has the part of a disgraced naval officer who enlists as a seaman to serve his country. A fight with a U-boat and the subsequent capture of a Nazi submarine supply ship highlight the picture. Jane Wyatt and Desi Arnaz are in the cast. "Brooklyn Orchid," with Skeets Gallagher is the second film.

Ice Spectacle.

"Ice Capades Revue," opening Sunday at the Park, features several outstanding skating champions including Vera Hruba, Joe Jackson and Red McCarthy. Ellen Drew and Richard Denning play the romantic leads. Miss Drew appears as the backer of her own ice show whose efforts are thwarted by an ex-racketeer who owns a rival attraction. Denning plays a young Broadwayite who champions her fight against the racketeer. "Atlantic Convoy," with John Beal and Bruce Bennett is the co-feature.

Musicale Film.

Red Skelton's picture, "Panama Hattie," opens at the Ritz Sunday and shares the bill with a Laurel and Hardy comedy, "A-Hunting We Will Go." The first film based on the stage musical contains many of the song hits of that version.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

'Tis the day after Christmas,
And all through the jernt,
There's not a darn thing to write—
If you get the pernt.

* * *

Plenty of things sportive occurred yesterday, I've no doubt, but not in sports. Sports took a holiday. And why not? Gosh, you can't expect us athletes to keep in training all year long.

So, since the sports give us nothing new to write about, we can look through a batch of papers and find something old. Podge marches on!

* * *

Here let's thank Kris Kringle
For a short little jingle.

The state high school basketball championship for the present season may not have been decided over the holiday, but it was narrowed down to one town, thanks to the Canton Repository, back in operation after its ten-strike—whoops, pardon me—four-day strike.

Says the Rep: "It looks very much like three of northern Ohio's leading scholastic quintets may be right in Canton. On the basis of early season showing, there seem to be few teams in this section of the state on the same level as McKinley, Lehman and Timken."

This is not very cheering holiday news for our Tyger tyros who are booked for bucketball battle with the McKinleys Feb. 26, and these further words on the subject by the Repository are even less consoling:

"Bup Rearick thinks his current McKinley team may prove to be the best he has ever coached, and that includes a Dover squad that won the state championship in 1933, and a 1940 Bulldog team that won 22 straight before losing in the state finals."

* * *

A state cage title for McKinley in the same school year which saw the Bulldog break Massillon's long victory string in football would complete a very satisfactory semester for the Republican. It's nice to be in the fieldhouse when there's something like that to cheer about.

Yankees Set Seven Records

Twenty-two New Marks Go Into American Books.

By JOHN CASHMAN

NEW YORK —(INS)— In a season featuring the complete absence of a single no-hit game or triple play, the New York Yankees broke 7 of a total of 22 record established by the American league in 1942.

* * *

Three of those marks, the official American league records revealed today, are league-leading home run records set by the Yankees previous to 1942, but overshadowed by last season's performance.

Their circuit-tamping records were broken are: Most years leading in home runs 23, most years with 100 or more home runs 21, and most consecutive years with 100 or more home runs, 18. The Yanks also broke their own record for the most years winning 100 games or more, with 8.

Sparkling in fielding as they did in batting the Bronx Bombers set a new major record league mark for double plays in a single game when they chalked up 7 against the Philadelphia A's. What is believed to be another major league record was the distinction of the Athletics in having 5 of their men hit into unbroken double plays. In this same game, Buddy Hassett and Phil Rizzuto, both of the Yanks, ran up five double plays at first and short, the former tying the league record and the latter tying the major league mark.

Rudy York, of Detroit, in coming across with 146 assists at first base bettered the record of Chick Gandil of Washington, who registered 143 in 1914. He also tied up the A. L. mark for the most runs in a single game by scoring five against the Chicago White Sox.

Frankie Crosetti, of the Yankees, was hopped by the pitcher 9 times in 1942, this making the sixth year out of the last seven in which he has led the league in that department.

The season of 1942 was the 20th in which no hitless games were recorded, and the second that saw a complete lack of triple plays.

The Chicago White Sox tied their own league record for fewest games played in a season with their 1942 total of 148, and the Philadelphia Athletics celebrated Connie Mack's league record-breaking 42 years as a manager by breaking the circuit record for most times finishing in last place, with 13.

Two Lose Titles In Uniform

Champions Unranked In Spite of "Freeze" Rule.

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK —(INS)— Two world champions now in service, light-heavyweight Gus Lesnevich and welterweight Freddie Cochrane, have lost supremacy in their class ratings, according to the copyrighted ratings released today by Ring Magazine, nationally famous magazine.

After an exhaustive search into Ring's records, which cover the activities of over 2,000 fighters, the following men were placed at the head of their divisions:

* * *

Jimmy Bivins, of Cleveland, is recognized as the number one man in the light-heavy class, despite the frozen title of Gus Lesnevich, who is now in the navy. Freddie Cochrane, whose welterweight title is also tied up for the time he is in the navy, ranks only fifth in the second group of his division. Henry Armstrong, Jackie Wilson, Cocoa Kid and Marty Servo were designated as better fighters than the seagoing welterweight.

Right below Joe Louis in the heavyweight class is Bob Pastor, who retired, with Billy Conn second, and Melio Bettina, third. Jimmy Bivins, who has consistently battled heavier men with good effect, is rated at the head of the No. 3 group of heavyweights.

The one fight Tony Zale turned in this year against Billy Conn, a ranking heavyweight, brought him the top rating in the middleweight class, with Georgie Abrams classed as second.

Despite the fact that he picked several soft spots and circumvented bouts with such high-ranking battlers as Jackie Wilson, of Los Angeles, and Cocoa Kid, of New Haven Ray Robinson is Ring's choice for 1942's No. 1 ringman and top welterweight, with Wilson and Cocoa Kid being ranked second and third, respectively. Henry Armstrong, who recently worked himself back into notice on the comeback trail, heads group number 2 among the welters.

Since he defeated Bob Montgomery twice, and Allie Stolz and Aldo Spoldi once, Sammy Angott heads the lightweight list, despite his retirement. The Ring does not recognize Beau Jack as the champion, but places him second in line to Angott, with Willie Joyce, Stolz and Tippy Larkin next.

The belief has been expressed by the Ring that the only logical way to determine a successor to Angott is the staging of an elimination tourney.

* * *

The man from whom Willie Pep won his featherweight crown, Chalky Wright, is rated as the No. 1 contender, followed by Lulu Constantino.

In the bantamweight division, Lou Salica and David Kui Kong, of Honolulu, rate behind Champion Manuel Ortiz.

Foreigners dominate the flyweights, with Jackie Peterson, of Glasgow, and Joe Curran, of Liverpool, rated next best to the title holder, Peter Kane, of England.

Corp. Barney Ross will be awarded a silver and gold medal by Ring Magazine as the person who did most for boxing in 1942. The former welterweight and lightweight champion earned it through his heroic accomplishments at Guadalcanal.

BOBO ARRIVES FOR FIGHT WITH WALKER

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Harry Bobo, Negro heavyweight from Pittsburgh, arrived at Columbus today to finish training for his fight with Buddy Walker Tuesday night to determine the Columbus version of the "duration" heavyweight champion.

Interest in the Columbus fight heightened when the Maryland State Athletic commission announced it had approved a bout between its "duration" champion, Alf Brown of Detroit, and the Bobo-Walker winner.

LEAVE TUSCALOOSA

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — (INS) — University of Alabama's Crimson Tide left Tuscaloosa early today en route to Miami, Fla., where they battle the Boston college Eagles in the Orange Bowl New Year's day. The Tides will stop over in Montgomery this afternoon to witness the annual Blue-Gray football classic before continuing their trip to the Florida city.

Alabama and Boston college are making their first appearances in the Orange Bowl game at Miami, Fla., Jan. 1, although the encounter this year will be the ninth annual game. Alabama, coached by Frank Thomas, won seven games against three losses this year. Boston college, coached by Denny Myers, lost but one game, the upset by Holy Cross, 52-12, in the season's finale. Stars of both teams are pictured above. The 1942 Orange Bowl game was won by Georgia, 40-26, over Texas Christian.

Registers Kick At Ring Mag

Cochrane's Manager Protests Ratings.

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Willie Gilzenberg phoned us from Newark, N. J., and the wire crackled from the heat of his words as he criticized "The Ring" magazine for "practically stripping Freddie Cochrane and Gus Lesnevich of their boxing championships as a penalty for serving Uncle Sam.

Welterweight Champion Cochrane of the navy and light heavyweight ruler Lesnevich of the coast guard are both New Jersey scrappers.

Gilzenberg, who manages Cochrane, protested vehemently against the Ring's annual rankings which rated Cochrane in sixth place among the world's welterweights, and Lesnevich No. 2 among the light heavies.

Gilzenberg, a small, dynamic man with a mop of curly black hair, declared: "The Ring Magazine points out that the titles of champions in the service are frozen for the duration, but at the same time practically takes away their titles by ranking two civilian Negroes at the top of the divisions in question—Ray Robinson among the welterweights and Jimmy Bivins among the light heavies.

"It's an outrage, I tell you. Cochrane, the first champion to enter the armed services in this war, is now at Pearl Harbor, more than 8,000 miles away—too far to do much protesting. Lesnevich is in the coast guard, and his manager, Joe Vella, is in the army. I wonder what these boys and their buddies will think about the rankings?"

Stressing the case of Cochrane, Gilzenberg recalled that the red-headed Irish lad from Elizabeth, N. J., enlisted in the navy on July 31, 1941—two days after winning the welter crown from Fritzie Zivic. Cochrane easily could have been deterred because of a "tennis elbow" which made one arm shorter than the other, or on grounds of dependency.

Our reaction to Gilzenberg's complaint is that Willie certainly has something to howl about. We believe Fleischer made a big mistake in trying to include service and civilian boxers in the same rankings. It's an injustice to the service men because their boxing activities are so restricted by other duties that they cannot remain ring-sharp.

However, we know that this was merely an error in judgment on Fleischer's part, because Editor Nat is one of the most patriotic men connected with the beak-busting business. It seems that Nat, in trying to be too thorough — too inclusive—did a bit of honest blundering.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—A lot of folks think that sports may do a complete fold-up in 1943, but you'd never guess it from the program for the last week in '42. . . . Maybe when they say they plan to carry on as long as possible, they mean "as far" too—today there's the Blue-Gray football game at Montgomery, Ala., and more big-time basketball than you can count, including doubleheaders at New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo. . . . Teams from Tennessee, Oregon State, Washington State, Wyoming, Southern California and Kansas play on these bills and the tours will continue here Monday and Wednesday at Philly Wednesday and maybe a few other places before they get home. . . . That big Oklahoma City tournament also starts Monday. . . . Tomorrow there's the pro bowl grid game (about which we have no complaints because it's a charity affair and involved very little travel. . . . There's a midweek meeting of the National Collegiate A. A. officers to substitute for the usual three-day holiday gabfests, a few odd bits of hockey and winter sports here and there and, of course, the bowl games. . . . Don't let that Jan. 1 fool you; they're still part of the old season.

And Dorothy Traung, who used to be one of the longest drivers among the women golfers, now drives a five-ton truck for the marine corps ordnance dept. in San Francisco. . . . FIRST MISSES.

Reversing our field with the assumption that all wrong picks of 1942 will be wiped out at midnight, Dec. 31, this dept. hereby offers its selections for the bowl games.

Rose Bowl—Georgia over U. C. L. A. on information and belief that Pacific coast teams haven't been up to standard. And even if Frankie Sinkwich has a couple of bad ankles, he still can pitch strikes.

Sugar Bowl—Tulsa over Tennessee, going overboard on hints that Tulsa has more than just an air circus.

Orange Bowl — Boston college over Alabama. Our info is that 'Bama fell short of greatness for lack of a standout tailback but we still believe that B. C. team is great—not to say mad about that Holy Cross thing.

Cotton Bowl—Texas over Georgia Tech; Sun Bowl—Hardin-Simmons over the Second Air Force; East-West—The West. . . . Guesses, that's all.

Former Middleweight Champion Fred Apostoli, somewhere at sea, reports his rating is to be changed from specialist, first class, to boatswain's mate, first class.

Rules Tennis Roost in '42

Ted Schroeder displays tennis title form.

NEW YORK —(AP)— A talkative two-fisted little Ecuadorean, Francisco (Pancho) Segura, furnished most of the color tennis offered this year but a homebred smasher from California won the national singles championship.

Young Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., whose reputation had largely been made in doubles, breezed through a singles field that had been denuded of many of its stars by military and professional calls, to whip Frankie Parker in the finals, 8-6; 7-5; 8-6; 4-6; 6-2.

* * *

The women's championship provided a surprise as Louise Brough, husky Beverly Hills, Calif., girl, who had won almost every major tournament of the summer, lost to Pauline Betz, last year's runner-up, from Winter Park, Fla. Miss Betz, trounced by her young rival several times in other tournaments, won 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Segura a dark youngster who bounded around the court for gets like Bitsy Grant, and his shots with a two-handed grip reminiscent of Australia's John Bromwich, jumped to the front by winning the Florida West coast tourney in the spring.

A shot in the arm to tennis, after the loss of such standouts as Bobby Riggs and Frank Kovacs, Segura pulled 'em in at the gate as he won six of his first ten tournaments, including Longwood and Eastern Clay courts singles. In the semi-finals of the nationals, however, Frankie Parker's steady baseline game drove him crazy and he lost in straight sets.

With the caliber of the field below par, this shaped up as Parker's year. The one-time Milwaukee prodigy, a challenger and ranking star for a decade, appeared too steady and experienced for the others. And he had little trouble getting to the finals but Schroeder's dynamic volleying attack cut him down.

After leading 4-2 in the first set and 5-2 in the second, Parker lost both sets before Schroeder's fiery offense. Parker's accurate targetry and forcing shots won the next two sets but in the last set, Frankie could not handle the inspired game Schroeder produced

NORTH, SOUTH SET FOR GRID BATTLE

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Forty-four gridiron huskies, hailed as the pick of collegiate talent from opposite sides of the Mason-Dixon line, stood poised here today to do battle in the fifth annual renewal of the Blue-Gray classic. Each team has won two games, making today's struggle the rubber game of the series.

Bill Vickroy of Ohio State and Joe Huha of Virginia Military institute will meet in the center of the field as rival captains to decide the final pre-game arrangements.

Pro All-Stars Please Coach

Pile Into Work With 70 Plays to Learn.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Heartley "Hunk" Anderson was a completely satisfied individual today as his National League All-Stars went into their last day of drills before their clash with the Washington Redskins in tomorrow's pro bowl classic at Shribe park.

If morale could do it, his team was a cinch to walk off the field with victory—and revenge, Anderson was convinced. He and his assistant, Luke Johnson, had completed a terrific task of drilling a mixed group of players in two systems of football in one short week, and the results, they said, were all they could ask for.

"We took a vote of players," Hunk explained, "and they voted for the T-formation. But we put in the Notre Dame box, too, just in case. You ought to see the way those fellows have wolfed down the work.

* * *

"Cecil Isbell, for instance. He figured we'd just use the T, but we gave them the Notre Dame shift, too, and we told Isbell: 'This is your style. Think you can show up Sammy Baugh?' We haven't been able to hold him since. I guess we gave those kids 70 plays, not counting variations, and not one of them has beefed."

Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins, continued to worry about lack of enthusiasm on his squad. The champions went through a light drill yesterday, confining their practice to touch football.

The all-stars lost Don Hutson when Dr. W. W. Kelly ordered the Green Bay kicking and pass-grabbing star to stay out of the game. The doctor said Hutson, injured Nov. 22 in a game against the New York Giants, had a cold, severe cough and chest injury.

Odds Drop on Georgia Club

Sinkwich Injuries Shift Betting Dope.

PASADENA, Cal. —(U.P.)— Georgia and UCLA headed into their training windup for the Rose Bowl today as the odds on the game dropped to two to one in favor of Georgia.

The shift in odds—they had been as high as three to one—came as apprehension developed over Frankie Sinkwich's condition. He was permitted to leave his bed yesterday but he limped so badly that it appeared doubtful whether he would be able to work out with the team before the game next Friday.

If his twisted right ankle should keep him from further practice, he won't be in the best shape. But if Frankie has anything to say about it he will be in the ball game for 60 minutes.

For the Rose Bowl is one thing he had looked forward to for a long time and he wants to make his final college game something worth remembering.

Georgia is likely to need its all-America ace at his best for the Bruins are going to be tougher than a lot of people think.

For one thing, Coach Babe Horrell and his boys aren't conceding the Bulldogs anything—not even when it comes to forward passing.

Figures don't always add up to a true picture but in the case of UCLA they at least show that the Bruins are going to have some ammunition.

Their statistics for the season do not approach Georgia's, but you can count that difference to some extent because UCLA played a harder schedule than the Bulldogs and one game less.

Georgia gained an average of 249 yards in its 11 games—a total of 2,661 yards by rushing and 2,291 by passing. UCLA's 10-game average was 263 yards with the rushing total 1,627 yards, and the passing figure 1,054.

Sinkwich alone gained 2,187 yards—the first player in modern football history to pass the 2,000-yard offensive mark—and Georgia's opponents were held to 1,251 yards on the ground and 642 yards in the air. UCLA yielded 1,217 yards on the ground and 1,097 in the air.

The brunt of the Bruin attack was led by Bob Waterfield. While his passing efficiency was not as high as Sinkwich's, he threw them when they counted. He completed 53 passes out of 125 attempts, but of those completions 12 went for touchdowns. His favorite receiver was lanky Milk Smith, who caught 16 of the throws for a total of 282 yards and three touchdowns.

The figures also show that UCLA's pass defense isn't as weak as generally supposed. The Bruins' opponents conected 81 times in 192 tries but only five of them were good for touchdowns.

The Bruins intercepted 26 of the enemy tosses and returned two of them for touchdowns. No team was able to score on UCLA on pass interceptions.

As in passing, UCLA's running game may not measure up to Georgia's but in Al Solari, Vic Smith and Ken Snelling the Bruins have backs who can make it tough for any club.

Add to this the fact that the only team able to floor Georgia this season was Auburn with its "T" formation and you can understand why Coach Wallace Butts and his assistants aren't underrating the Bruins and their modified version of the "T".

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

California deer have become so emboldened under the requests of the Fourth Military District to ease up on deer hunting until victory is achieved, that two magnificent specimens wandered on to the front lawn of William Walker. Walker was minus both a gun and a hunting license, so the family dog was called on to save a little pasturage for the family cow by frightening the deer away.

George Willis, an Ohio policeman was casting plug at Paint Creek. As he made a long cast, two cock pheasants burst from brush near by and winged across creek, Willis' plug hit one of the birds, entagling it in line. This odd catch was reeled in, and the amazed bird taken off and released.

Hunters! Now that you will soon be putting your guns away for another season, be sure they're protected by Fiendoil, before you store them. And then when you turn to indoor sports, don't forget that ping pong can furnish loads of fun and enjoyment, right in your own home. You can get the right equipment at Yuncker's, priced from $1.35 for a complete ping pong set.

The Colorado River squawfish is by far the largest of North American minnows. This little finner attains lengths of five feet, and weighs up to eighty pounds.

One of the greatest game destroyers among birds is the great horned owl. He glides silently as a shadow through the night and pounces on grouse and rabbits, and murders them wholesale. This doesn't mean that one should take a shot at every owl he sees, as most of them are friends of the farmer.

* * *

Don't forget food for our feathered friends during winter's cold snaps. Birds that remain here have a tough time finding food when the ground is covered with ice and snow, and a feeding box with crumbs, grain or suet, placed conveniently in a tree will win their chirps of appreciation.

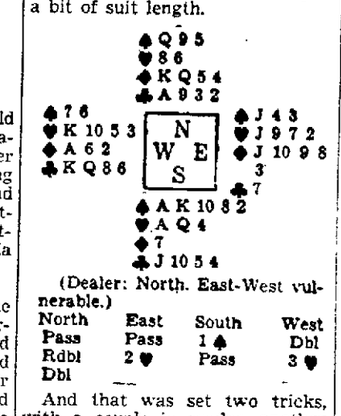
"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU HAD BETTER KNOW

There are very few situations, in the course of normal bidding, in which the finer players attach very different meanings to bids. Perhaps the outstanding of these comes when your partner has made an informative or take-out double, the partner of the opening bidder redoubles and it is your turn. If you bid some other suit now, your call is likely to be interpreted in either of two extremely divergent ways. Some partners will consider that you are showing substantial values of one kind or another, and some will think you are proclaiming to the world extreme weakness with just a bit of suit length.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl
Rdbl	2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥
Dbl

And that was set two tricks, with a couple in spades, another brace in diamonds and one each in clubs and hearts. That gave the defenders 500 points, more than the value of the not vulnerable spade game which they might have made.

The entire trouble here was that East and West had no idea of what they would mean if the partner of a doubler made a bid after the partner of the original bidder redoubled. West thought it would show that East had quite a hand and was trying to tell him he almost had an original bid hand, that South had made an opening with one of those not vulnerable which you bid in third position to obstruct probably strong opposition.

East took the view that a bid over the redouble showed a worthless hand with a bit of distribution, that otherwise he would have passed and come in later to show decent values.

The moral of this is that, if you have time to ask your partner three or four questions, one of them had better be what a bid means after your partner doubles and the next player redoubles.

Your Week-End Lesson

Suppose South bids 1-Spade, West passes, North calls 2-Spades, East 3-Hearts, South 4-Spades, West doubles and North passes, what should East do with the hand below, and for what two reasons?

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—After a half-day Christmas layoff during which each player was given a wrist watch, members of the east-west grid squads returned to the two-a-day routine today as they rounded into shape for the Shrine benefit contest to be held New Year day in Kezar Stadium.

The most powerful offensive combine thrown together by west coaches Babe Hollingbery and Don Faurot includes the versatile Bob Kennedy of Washington State at left half; Tony Compagio of St. Mary's at fullback; and two of Faurot's Missouri-trained boys—Don Reece at quarter and Bob Steuber at right half.

Hollingbery and Faurot agreed that their plans are still in an unjelled stage, but appeared satisfied with that foursome as their best starting threat. As an alternate backfield, the west field general's had on tap a quartet made up of Tommy Roblin of Oregon at fullback; Willie Zaplac of Texas A. & M. at quarter, and Californians Jim Jurkovich and Frank Porto at the halfback posts.

East Coaches Andy Kerr and Dr. George Hauser, after several experiments, announced a starting backfield composed of Paul Governali of Columbus and Les Horvath of Ohio State at the halfback posts; George Ceithalm of Michigan at quarter, and Bert Stiff of Pennsylvania at fullback.

Ready to relieve that all-star combination, the east has on tap a backfield that includes George Lynn, Ohio State, quarter; Bill Daley, Minnesota and Max Kiebasa, Duquesne, halfbacks, and Steve Filopwicz, Fordham, fullback.

A Little Step Away

To close the eye, to fall asleep.
To draw a labored breath.
To find release from daily cares
In what we know as death.

Is this the crowning of a life,
The aim or end thereof?
The totaled sum of consciousness.
The ripened fruit of love?

It cannot be for works of God
Are wrought for nobler ends.
And those away continue on
In the hearts of kin and friends.

It cannot be, for they live on
A little step away.
The soul, the everlasting life,
Has found a better day.

WE WISH to express our deep appreciation and thanks to all our friends and relatives for their kindness during the illness and death of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Daisy Norris. Our special thanks to the Great Lakes Steel Corporation, to the Jones Memorial for their assistance, and to Rev. Paul H. Saleska for his consoling words. Also to those who made floral offerings.

viously had offered practically no resistance, and in the southwestern part of Burma were believed to have holed up at Akyab.

Lieut. Gen. N. M. S. Irwin, Indian-born commander of the eastern army in India, told his command in a Christmas message that he was preparing the day to "set in motion great armies" against Burma.

"We've assured the integrity of India's eastern frontier, and our advanced forces are steadily, if slowly as yet, moving forward in Burma. It's a satisfactory first step."

The Japanese raid on Calcutta Christmas eve was the fourth in a week, and observers had no doubt they were reprisal for punishing British raids on objectives in Burma.

The first three raids, it was officially announced, killed 25 and injured less than 100 civilians.

There was some evidence of natives evacuating Calcutta, but no panic such as followed bombings of Rangoon last year.

Driving north from below Buna mission, American doughboys succeeded in securing a bridgehead across the entrance to a creek which threatens the Japanese lines of communication from the mission to the strongly defended main air-strip one mile to the southeast.

Meanwhile, Allied forces on the right flank are advancing along the strip from the eastern end. This portion of the strip is defended by a formidable collection of Japanese pillboxes.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Ohio Fuel Gas Company Wishes Mansfield a Nutritious New Year

Home Service Unit Plans Health Giving Diets

As we look ahead with optimism to a victorious New Year, we are even more determined than before to contribute added thought and energy to the home defense program.

One of the most interesting phases of home front activity we note is in the field of nutrition.

Through Mrs. Pauline Treisch, home service representative, the Ohio Fuel Gas company brings the latest news and techniques in the "nutrition for defense" plan to build stronger and healthier Americans.

Mrs. Treisch, a graduate of the Home Economics department at Ohio State university, helps homemakers in Mansfield, Ashland, Shelby, Willard, Galion, Crestline, Mt. Gilead and Marion learn the latest news on the "food for fitness" campaign.

Mrs. Treisch has set up nutrition centers in all of the cities in the Mansfield district and valuable information and literature may be secured at these centers.

Questions on nutrition will be answered by Mrs. Treisch at the various nutrition centers. When she is not present, visitors may leave questions or suggestions and will receive their answers by mail.

In addition to this the Gas company issues a monthly bulletin to aid housewives in conserving food and preserving vitamins.

The nutrition center at one of the Gas company offices in the Mansfield area also serves as a clearing house for information on nutrition classes being held in the vicinity.

Nutrition classes are taught under the direction of the Red Cross or civilian defense councils. Persons contacting the nutrition center who are interested in joining one of these classes may leave name and address and will be notified when a new class is being formed.

Mrs. Treisch, Mansfield home service representative, is experienced in the work of handling foods. Before coming to Mansfield she taught home economics in the public schools.

The main office of the Ohio Fuel Gas company is in Columbus. The company employs 14 home service department members who are located in Mansfield, Columbus, Toledo, Springfield, Elyria, Fremont, Newark, Athens, Cambridge and Findlay.

The local nutrition center is located in the Gas company office, corner of Park avenue and Mulberry street. Here, homemakers may secure monthly nutrition bulletins, pamphlets on war work, monthly recipe sheets and booklets which will be helpful in planning adequate diets.

In planning proper diets, Mrs. Treisch suggests that vegetables be used sufficiently. "Vegetables are classes among the protective foods," says Mrs. Treisch, and are important in the regulation of bodily processes.

"Every day, everyone needs at least three vegetables and a potato. If they eat these they get starches and sugars for energy; proteins for building, minerals such as calcium, iron, iodine, copper and phosphorous; vitamins A, B, C, E, and G; bulk, help to keep alkaline balance and a variety in meals. To get vitamin D, sunshine or any of the cod liver oils is necessary."

According to Mrs. Treisch, the first important step is in the selection and purchase of the foods. To get the most for your money, she suggests the five following rules:

1. Patronize a market that has a daily turnover of fresh vegetables. Remember that wilted vegetables are lower in vitamin content.
2. Choose fresh, firm vegetables to avoid waste.
3. Buy by the pound if possible.
4. Select vegetables when they are least expensive.
5. Take home the tops of beets and turnips and use them.

"But selection is not the only important step in getting the most out of your food," says Mrs. Treisch. "Adequate storage and proper preparation is also important. In storing foods, it is important to keep a constant check on them to make sure that spoilage will be prevented from spreading."

"The important nutrients found in vegetables may be lost through careless methods of preparation and cooking," she continues. "Some minerals are readily dissolved out in the cooking water and unless this liquid is used, they are wasted."

Cooking charts giving the proper time for cooking vegetables are available at the nutrition centers of the Gas Company in the Mansfield area.

Among the hints given to homemakers by Mrs. Treisch to assure the most benefit from vegetables are these:

1. Vegetables should be prepared just before cooking so that cut surfaces are not exposed long to air. Do not soak peeled vegetables in water before cooking.
2. Cooking vegetables in their skins helps preserve food value.
3. Do not use soda in cooking green vegetables as it destroys vitamins.
4. Cook vegetables in a small amount of water in as short a time as possible.
5. Frying foods causes a great loss of vitamins A, B, and C.
6. Utilize any liquid remaining on fresh, canned or cooked vegetables in making soups, gravy and stews.

"Winning the war is everyone's job," says Mrs. Treisch. "You can do your own part right in your own home by making your family strong; by selecting and serving the foods that will keep them healthy, happy and fit."

As canteen group prepared an outdoor meal at North Park recently . . . an experiment in emergency feeding. Members of this canteen group are graduates of nutrition classes conducted by Mrs. Pauline Treisch, Home Economist for the Ohio Fuel Gas company.

Weaver Offers Choice Wines For Holiday

The greatest day in the year for meeting and greeting old friends is near at hand . . . New Year, when good fellows get together for the sake of Auld Lang Syne.

There is no greater host to hospitality than wine and no wider selection of fine wines in Mansfield than at Weaver's Home Supply, 59 South Diamond street.

Sherman Weaver, who will serve you there, is an authority on wine as an accompaniment to your favorite fowl or meat for your New Year dinner. Beside the proper table wine, he will suggest an aperitif or cocktail wine and a sweet wine for dessert and between meals.

You may also want to discuss with Mr. Weaver the care, coddling and traditional temperatures for serving fine wines in just the "right" manner.

Though your wine cellar is a pantry shelf, plan to have a pleasant variety . . . to please both the palates of yourself and your guests. At Weaver's home Supply, you will find a complete stock of domestic wines as well as Portuguese, Italian and French wines and Vermouth. A few cases of that great French appetizer, Dubonet, are still left, Weaver says, but when these are gone, he warns, there will be no further source of supply.

Weaver is also enthusiastic about a new shipment of high grade "white dinner wine" which he suggests is particularly delicious when served with turkey or any white meat. Mr. Weaver will be glad to discuss with you the proper method of serving this wine to insure the perfect touch to your holiday meal.

A special featured by Weaver's this week will be a splendid Tom and Jerry batter. With this product, you need have no fuss, no muss . . . just add water or milk to the preparation and your Tom and Jerry is ready to serve.

In addition to the wide stock of wines carried regularly by Weaver's Home Supply, 36 brands of beer are stock and you may purchase every delicacy for a "Dutch" lunch.
